Tom's Wife

By A. M. DAVIES OGDEN

Copyright, 1903, by E. C. Parcells

Down in the street a sudden bursting of bombs announced an "extra," and the sick man lying on the bed in the little hotel room stirred wearily and opened his eyes. A touch of "chuchu" had taken strength and vitality, and an intense depression weighed like a stone on body and soul. There could be no news in this South American republic that interested him. The president had probably made a speech; the weekly steamship from England had arrived. At the thought a sob surged up into his throat. England, his country, how far away and how dear!

Resting there, motionless, passive, picture after picture began to flit through his brain—the trim little country houses, covered with vines and with trees where the rooks cawed eternally; the narrow, honeysuckle hedged lanes. And Tom—dear old Tom. The man's face softened. And Alice. He moved restlessly and strove to think of other things, of his life in the ten years since he had watched the white cliffs of the Needles fading into the distance. Sheep raising, farming, mining, he had tried his hand at them all.

And now, ill and forlorn, he lay alone in this room in Buenos Ayres. It was time for his medicine. The doctor had bidden him be particular about it, but Rockhill frowned. What was the use of getting well? he mused listlessly. Nobody cared; there was nobody to care.

The thoughts of England came thronging back, strong, insistent, refusing to be suppressed. Rockhill, weak physically and mentally, let himself drift on the tide. What had become of Tom—Tom, with his brave blue eyes, his glorious voice? He could not remember the time when he and Tom had not been sworn companions, robbing the orchards, whipping the pools together. To Rockhill, a lonely boy living with a stern old uncle, the companionship of the other lad had been the brilliant web woven against the dull woof of home life. And the golden thread worked into the pattern, giving it the final touch of beauty and preciousness—ah, that had been Alice!

Closing his eyes, the man saw again the sweet, girlish face surrounded by its tangle of gold brown hair. How joyously they all had lived and frolicked together until the time when Rockhill, eager and ambitious, had departed for college.

The man on the bed shivered, the memory of that return from college was yet so poignant. In one night the hope of a life had been undone. It was then that he had left England. And from that day he had heard no word of those behind. Were they happy, those two? That Alice and Tom were long since married he never doubted. Did they ever speak of him, wonder about his abrupt disappearance? He brooded over it wistfully. Had they cared?

Still drowsing in the grip of old memories, Rockhill lay, as the daylight faded, half dreaming, half awake, when suddenly the sound of a voice in the next room brought him up with a start. A man was singing softly below his breath, but still quite distinguishably. Rockhill, clutching the bedclothes with shaking hands, tried to reason with himself. It was a dream, an illusion conjured up by fancy and fever. But the voice kept steadily on. There was no mistaking those clear, mellow tones. It was Tom's voice. Tom himself was singing in the next room.

Rockhill's dry lips tried to form a word. "Tom," he breathed, "Tom." But no sound came. A sudden unreasoning despair seized him. Tom was there, close to him, and he could not call him, could not attract his attention. He would go and Rockhill would be left alone again, this time forever. He must make Tom hear, he must. And then slowly, carefully, his voice breaking on the feeble notes, the man on the bed began to sing. Weak, barely audible, in phrasing and intonation the notes were yet a recognizable imitation of Tom singing his favorite song as he had sung it so often in those old days.

There was a stir in the next room, then the sound of the hasty opening and shutting of a door. The next moment Rockhill's own door flew open and on the threshold stood a man, tall, eager faced, with clear blue eyes.

"Tom!" cried Rockhill. "Tom!" And he fainted. When he recovered consciousness Tom, his eyes suspiciously bright, was kneeling by the bedside. He held Rockhill's two wasted hands tightly clasped in his own.

"Gilbert, old fellow," he was saying. "Gilbert, where have you kept yourself all these years?" he pursued, and his voice was tenderly reproachful. "How could you run off that way?"

Gilbert smiled in pure content at hearing the well known voice.

"I—oh, never mind me," he answered. "I was all right till I was taken ill in this confounded hole. But you, Tom—you," as if famished for news—"how did you come here and your wife"—his voice faltering on the word.

But Tom did not notice.

"Yes, my wife is with me," he said cheerily. "But how did you know that I was married? Oh, guessed," as the other nodded. "You must know, too, then, that I am now a celebrity," with mock seriousness. "No? You hadn't guessed that? Well, at least you were aware that I had taken up singing as my profession. Therefore I let myself be persuaded into coming to South America for a series of concerts. And so here I am," shrugging an amused shoulder. "But now you must tell me about yourself," he went on, his tone suddenly changing. "Why did you slip off so, Gilbert? Was it kind to leave us all these years without a word?"

The sick man hesitated. What he had done suddenly seemed to him small and foolish. But at twenty-one heroics are sometimes strong in their appeal. And he had tried to do his best. It was all over now, though. The truth could do no harm now. He looked up into Tom's face.

"Do you remember the night after my return from college," he began slowly—"how we sat in your room and talked? I had come home feeling that at last I had accomplished something—that I was nearing the goal on which my eyes had been set since I could remember seeing anything. And then"—he paused again—"that night you told me of your love for Alice," he said quietly. "And in that moment I renounced my dream. Oh, don't mind," he added hastily as the other started. "It is all ended long ago. I should not tell were it not," lying manfully, "I have long since left that love behind. But, then, I felt that there was nothing for me but flight. And so"—

"And you sacrificed yourself for me?" cried Tom, deeply moved. "Oh, Gilbert!" But Gilbert stretched out a remonstrant hand.

"Dear old boy," he said tenderly, "was there ever anything that I could not have done for you? You loved her"—

"Yes," said Tom musingly, "I loved her. But now—you are sure that you have quite, quite forgotten"—with a sudden eagerness.

"Sure," returned the other with loyal lips. "I can meet her without a pang. And—and anyway I am going to die," he added faintly.

"Die!" shouted Tom. "Die! Not much. We will see what Mabel has to say about that."

"Mabel?" questioned Rockhill.

"Why, yes, my wife," laughed Tom. "Oh, of course, I forgot she was only a child when you went away. She is Alice's little sister."

"Alice's sister!" gasped Rockhill. Tom's face altered suddenly.

"Why—you didn't think—did you believe that I had married Alice?" he demanded. "You did?" He stopped. "Alice refused me," he went on a moment later. "She has never married. I think she never has cared but for one man," he said with slow significance. "Yet—if you have forgotten"—

The sick man, stirred by a sudden energy, sat up in bed.

"Give me my medicine, please," he said concisely. "I am going to get well. Where is Mabel?"

The Change in Disraeli's Name.

In the year 1872 the printing plant and effects of the late John Grundy (a successor in the business of Vine Hall author of "The Sinner's Friend" and father of the late Rev. Newman Hall, of Bank street, Maidstone, were sold by auction, and after the sale, as an apprentice to John Grundy, I was employed in the clearing up process, during which I came across file and other copies of Conservative literature printed at that establishment in connection with the election by which Disraeli was returned one of the two members of parliament for Maidstone. Some of it had the name spelled Disraeli, but a roll of from a dozen to a score of copies of an election address bore the printed signature D'Israeli. I asked the overseer (Highstead, who was then elderly and had been continuously in employment in that establishment since boyhood days) for an explanation, and he said that when Disraeli came to examine a proof of his election address somebody suggested (the overseer's belief being that it came from Vine Hall) that the name would look more English-like if the apostrophe were taken out. Disraeli assented, and it came out, and in further printing work a like omission was observed.—John H. Burrows in Athenaeum.

The Man With the Toothache.

A man with the toothache doesn't care about anything else. The glories of the world pall on his taste, the wonders of creation seem as naught.

The tooth becomes a volcano of belching fury and the rest of life hidden in a cloud of its billowing smoke.

You can't borrow anything from a man with the toothache. You can't instruct and improve him. You tell him that the world travels at the rate of 1,000 miles a minute and it doesn't startle him in the least. He simply groans.

You say to him, "My friend, there are stars so far off that their light has not yet reached this world," but he doesn't mind it. He only howls.

You tell him that some of the sun spots are 100,000 miles in diameter, and that one of them would take a Jupiter at one mouthful, but it is nothing to him. The toothache is neglectful of scientific truths.—London Tit-Bits.

A Case of Pronouns.

Tommy Mulligan of the seventh grade was absent from the class room for one entire day. It would appear that he had played truant, for, unknown to Tommy, his teacher had spied him trudging homeward with pockets bulging suspiciously when she, too, was homeward bound that afternoon.

But Tommy brought a note of excuse the next morning, which, of course, would prove that he had been detained at home legitimately. The writing was hardly that of a feminine hand, and the note appeared to have been written laboriously and with much blotting. Furthermore, the penmanship seemed to be strangely familiar to his teacher. The note read as follows:

"Dear teacher—Please excus Tomy for not comeing to shool yestiddy. he cudnot come I tore my pants.—Mrs. Mulligan."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

CEMETERY VAULTS.

The Building of Them Is a Profession In Itself.

The vault was the size of the usual cemetery vault—one small room, roofed, floored and walled with granite, an ordinary vault—and yet the undertaker said it had cost $25,000.

"But there is no carving on it," objected the man who thought of buying a lot. "It is as plain as a pipestem, and all the stone it contains could be bought for $10,000 or less."

"True, true," said the undertaker. And he pointed to another vault that might have been the first one's twin. "That only cost $15,000," he said, "a saving of $10,000, but the broker who bought it got abominably stuck.

"The cheap vault, you see, was built, as a house is, by an architect and an ordinary builder. It looks good. It will last for centuries. But, by Jove, it leaks like a sieve! After every storm it is flooded, and two of the cemetery attendants have to charge up a day's time against the owner for cleaning it out.

"Vault building is a profession in itself. To make for a vault a waterproof roof of enormous granite slabs is an art that only the vault builder understands. When the ordinary builder, no matter how proficient he may be, undertakes this task he fails lamentably. The vault leaks. After every storm its floor is flooded.

"Therefore, if ever you invest in a vault let a specialist erect it for you. He will charge you a good many thousands extra, but he will give you a good, satisfactory job."—New York Herald.

Docile Ducks of the Chinese.

In China the duck is much esteemed as an article of diet, and what may be called duck farms are common on most of the rivers. The birds are taught to hunt for their food, and the rearing of them costs little. They are kept in boats with a platform or deck extending outward on each side. These boats are taken to the shallow, marshy parts by the banks of the streams, and the ducks are then driven ashore to enjoy themselves in the mud flats. So well are the birds trained that at a given signal they cease eating and follow their leader back into the boat, where they lie during the night. Ducks preserved by being salted are a favorite food with the well to do.

Indian Remedies.

The Indian pharmacopoeia comprised thoroughwort, spurge and Indian hemp, used as emetics; the bark of the horse chestnut and butternut, used as cathartics. They were also acquainted with many poisons, most of which were used on their weapons. For asthma they employed tobacco and sassafras, for coughs slippery elm, for dropsy the wild gooseberry, for wounds powdered puff balls. They treated boils with onion poultices.

Training an Orator.

It seems at one period the Lews orator shut himself in a dark room, wrapped a plaid round him, lay on his back and placed a large stone on the pit of his stomach. After about from twelve to twenty-four hours of this he was ready for his speech.—London Saturday Review.

The Bargain.

Littleton—What under the canopy are you going to do with all that white satin? Mrs. Littleton—Why, it's for baby! It was such a bargain. I knew I'd never find any so cheap again, and it will be lovely for her wedding gown. —Brooklyn Life.

He Knew.

"Come, Willie," said mother at the table, "sit up like a man."

"Why, mother," replied Willie, "men sit down for their food; it's only dogs that sit up."—Exchange.

There is no path so steep as that of fame.—Hazlitt.

A CLEAN MAN.

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues and fibers in every organ of the body. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood.

Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh. It doesn't make the flabby fat of corpulency, but the firm flesh of health. It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol to inebriate or create craving for injurious stimulants.

Mr. John L. Coughenour, of Glen Savage, Somerset Co., Pa., writes: "My appetite was unusually poor, and I was as weak and nervous as though I had been starved for months. My heart kept throbbing continually and I was short of breath. Finally I wrote to you for advice and you informed me that I had indigestion and a torpid liver. I did not think your diagnosis was right, but I ordered six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' from you and began its use. After using three bottles I began to improve slowly and soon went to work, and I have been working ever since."

Thoughts at Random.

No city has the right kind of a foundation on which to build unless it is sanitary and has a good system of sewerage. Few people want to build fine houses where they cannot have modern conveniences and advantages. The least Sonoma can do until we get a sewer system, is to keep her ditches and cesspools in good condition. In order to see that this is done the work has to be properly supervised by proper authorities. This summer, and for many summers past, we have emphasized the fact that the drainage system of our town was most crude. If the foul ditches have not bred disease germs they are nevertheless obnoxious and unsightly. They savor of epidemic, and outsiders will not be persuaded to stay here long enough to find out whether or not the ditches will cause sickness. They will not take chances, when other towns of the same size are provided with modern sewers. While Sonoma is waiting for the time to come when she, too, will have an up-to-date system of sewerage, let the city be ever vigilant of the cleansing of its ditches, and let each individual be responsible for the sanitary condition of his own premises through the use of disinfectants and other means of sanitation.

Berkeley has demonstrated the fact that Board of Trade members will come out en masse to a banquet to discuss the welfare of their community. The following measures were advocated as being essential to the upbuilding of a community: The municipal ownership of water, manual training in the schools, good streets, substantial school buildings, tree planting, parks, gardens, sewer system and a town hall. The Sonoma Valley Board of Trade, with the proper spirit infused into it, could work toward all these ends. It should be the nucleus of all progress and improvements, and all good ideas should eminate from it and be diffused by it. There is the great function of a Board of Trade, but our organization is a vacuum, devoid even of hot air.

Two numbers of Gleason's, the new weekly periodical published in San Francisco, and edited by Mr. Edward B. Payne, are on our desk. It is a satisfaction to read such good commentary as is to be found in "The Horizon," the editorial department of this paper, and to be so entertainingly posted on civics and politics, society, music, "The Game," police news, and the play, all of which topics are admirably handled by competent writers. We predict not only success for Gleason's, but also the gaining of much prestige as a moulder of public opinion, for the opinions voiced therein are fresh and new and logical.

This next two months are the months that all business people should realize are star advertising months. It is in the winter time, when trade is duller than usual, that merchants should make an effort to attract people and get them to buy. The buyer will be tempted if the merchant presents bargains to him through an attractive advertisement. The Index-Tribune will make a specialty of writing up attractive ads which will please the merchants and interest the people.

Duncan McKinlay is credited with having stopped the Chinese boycott of American goods through his treating with Chinese merchants in Hongkong. The credit is given him by one of the largest milling concerns on the Pacific Coast, and speaks fine for our Congressman, although we have always predicted that he would make himself felt in affairs in just such ways.

Reckless shooting in the very heart of town should be strictly prohibited, and anyone found guilty of endangering lives and seeking to damage property in this way should be severely dealt with. An example thould be made of this class of malefactors, else the practice might become more general.

The Mayor of San Rafael is rightfully trying to have the residents of West End cease maintaining ill-smelling cesspools and vaults, as typhoid fever has resulted frem unsanitary conditions in that locality.

And now there is a cauliflower trust. Monopoly is certainly kind of cabbaging on to everything.

The man who was taken to jail in a scavenger's cart probably had several scraps before he got to prison.

Vast and in many instances, disastrous changes are to be contemplated as the result of radical alteration of transportation policies in the United States. Sections that thrive under arrangements now existing must, if new conditions are created, expect to lose much that has been acquired.

The power to prescribe rates through a Commission is tantamount to the ability to apportion commerce through the same agency. The Interstate Commerce Commission, if Congress sees fit to give its sanction to proposed law, will be placed in a position to decide in favor of one part of the public as against another part of the public. The freight rates are competent to determine the direction in which interstate commerce shall move.

Will the Commission make the rates? That leading issue has been more or less befogged by discussion, but the answer is plainly seen by all men of business. With powers to fix rates upon complaint and hearing, any tribunal so invested will occupy the same position as a traffc manager in this respect. Not only one rate, but every rate could be altered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, for if the Commission could not originate a complaint there is probably not one rate in existence that some one would not complain of, hoping to secure individual benefits.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, if able to change every rate will, in fact, become the traffic manager of every railroad in the United States, to whatever extent it chooses to exercise that power.

The Better Way

The tissues of the throat are inflamed and irritated; you cough, and there is more irritation—more coughing. You take a cough mixture and it eases the irritation—for a while. You take and it cures the cold. That's what is necessary. It soothes the throat because it reduces the irritation; cures the cold because it drives out the inflammation; builds up the weakened tissues because it nourishes them back to their natural strength. That's how Scott's Emulsion deals with a sore throat, a cough, a cold, or bronchitis.

SHOT BY COMRADE WHILE HUNTING

Chas. Bishop of San Francisco Accidentally Injured on Marsh and Loses An Arm.

Chas. Bishop, an employee in a San Francisco blacksmith shop, was accidentally shot by Teddy Brundage while out duck hunting on the marsh near Sears' Point last Sunday morning.

Bishop and Brundage were in a boat and both had shotguns. Brundage warned Bishop to lay low while he took a shot at a flock of ducks, but just at this moment the boat suddenly tipped and the lurch threw Bishop directly in front of the gun, just as it was discharged by Brundage. He received the full charge in his right wrist, which was almost severed from the arm. Brundage was badly frightened, but tied up the wound of his companion with a handkerchief and flagged the up train, on which the injured man was brought to town. Dr. Thomson found his condition to be very serious.

Bishop was in a very weak condition, having lost a great quantity of blood, and the injured arm had to be amputated Tuesday in spite of the efforts of the physicians to save it.

At latest accounts, the patient was resting easy at the home of Mrs. Green on Broadway. He will remain under the care of Dr. Thomson until he is able to return to his home in San Francisco.

Important Assignment to Former Sonoma Resident

Mr. Otto von Geldern, civil engineer, has just returned from a two-month's trip to Los Angeles. He had been charged by the Federal Government to make a thorough investigation of San Pedro Harbor, with the view of ascertaining any changes made in the outer harbor by the building of the huge breakwater, which has been carried out to the extent of two miles, creating smooth water within its confines.

The investigation was quite an arduous one, requiring many men, launches, boats and nautical facilities. His report on the harbor has been made to the government.

The question of the water supply of one of the larger towns of the southern part of the state has his attention at the present time, and he will soon leave the city again to be gone for some time.

Geissellman in a Runaway

A. Geissellman of Agua Caliente had a fortunate escape from serious injury, the fore part of the week, when he had the experience of being in a runaway. While driving along the county road between here and Agua Caliente the king bolt of his rig broke, frightening the horse and causing it to run away. Geissellman hung on to the reins but was dragged to the ground and badly bruised and shaken up.

A New Enterprise

On Sunday Geo. G. Daunt, the Petaluma jeweler, shipped a large wall case over to Sonoma to display his wares at Mrs. Lutgen's store, and he intends to carry a complete line of watches, clocks and jewelry at all times, so there will be no need for any one to go away from Sonoma for their wants in the jewelry line. Mr. Daunt's opening up of a branch store here fills a long-felt want.

Property Damaged by Reckless Shooting

On Sunday night a hilarious resident of this place, who had been imbibing rather freely, began to have visions of being a rough-rider, cowboy or brigand and after looking up a gun, commenced to shoot up the town in the vicinity of the postoffice. Two shots were fired before the reckless man was deprived of his weapon, and one of the bullets went through a window in Dr. Byron's office, crashing through the glass and breaking a portion of the doctor's X-ray apparatus. The damage amounted to about $25.

BATCHELOR MUST EXPLAIN TO COURT

Plaintiff in Divorce Action Does Not Obey Order or Show up With Counsel

L. D. Batchelor, the plaintiff in the sensational divorce proceedings against his wife, Susie Batchelor, failed to show up in court on Monday when Judge Burnett called the case, and was not even represented by counsel. Attorney T. S. Minot, through a communication, informed the court that he had withdrawn from the case, and his withdrawal is a surprise to everyone after the bitter fight he began for his client, Batchelor. It also developed that the plaintiff had failed to pay his wife the $50 ordered paid to her after the partial hearing of the motion for alimony. Because of his failure to pay and appear, the court issued a bench warrant for Batchelor's appearance to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt in having failed to obey the court's order. It is returnable Monday.

Sporting Notes

The Jones ranch at McGill's station has been placarded with hunting notices warning hunters to keep off the premises. So great has become the hunting nuisance that last Saturday Manager Keechler fired eight hunters, whom he found in a bunch on Brush slough. The Pacific Reclamation Company complain bitterly of the stampeding of stock on the ranch, the firing of stubble, etc., and has given out that arrests will surely follow all trespassers found on the ranch.

F. D. Spaulding gives notice in another column that he has secured a lease of the Marcucci ranches at Embarcadero for shooting purposes and he will strictly enforce the law against tresspassing or shooting on the same.

Quail were quite numerous hereabouts just before the opening of the season, but true to the instincts of the bird, they have made themselves exceedingly scarce since October 15th, and will no doubt remain in hiding until the rainy season sets in.

Ducks are still quite numerous on the marshes south of town, and some fine bags have been made the past week.

A Wife's Revenge

[Original.]

During the latter part of the eighteenth century two young men, Jean Desmoulins and Alphonse Cateret, both living in Dijon, France, were bosom friends. Cateret proposed marriage to a young girl, Louise Plancon, but his suit was rejected. Louise secretly loved his friend Desmoulins, and in the course of time Desmoulins married her. He was so devoted to Cateret that Louise thought it best not to tell him that Alphonse had once sought her hand, and since Alphonse never told him he was in ignorance of the fact.

Ten years passed. Cateret had gone to Paris to live soon after his friend's marriage, the Desmoulinses following later. Both men became leaders in the revolution which was sweeping over France like a cyclone. One evening Desmoulins came across the Seine by the bridge directly opposite the corps legislatif and walked toward the Place de la Concorde, or Place de la Revolution, as it was then called. At the same time Cateret turned into the place from the opposite direction. The two men met at that point where the guillotine was set up and where it had done a great work that very day. Night was falling, and the Place was deserted except for the friends. They stopped directly under the instrument of death and began to talk.

"Alphonse," said Jean, "this revolution is like a tongue of flame which at one moment sweeps in one direction, the next in another. The favorite of today is the condemned of tomorrow.

"You are right, Jean. Do you know that if either of us has an enemy that enemy can send the man he hates to the guillotine."

"I don't like it," replied Jean. "If I were single like you, I would not mind the danger so much, but I consider my family."

Cateret stood for awhile lost in thought, then said: "I have an idea. Suppose we make an agreement. If you are the victim, I will pay your wife 50,000 francs; if I am the victim, you pay my mother the same amount."

After some discussion Desmoulins consented, and the friends went to Cateret's house, where the contract was drawn up in duplicate, duly executed, and each party to it took a copy.

Ten days after this agreement Desmoulins was arrested under an accusation of having corresponded with the royalists across the border. He had received a letter from a fugitive, but no one knew of it except his friend Cateret, to whom he had shown it. But there was nothing in this, for the letter, bearing a foreign mark, must have been opened in the postoffice.

Louise Desmoulins was frantic at the danger that threatened her husband As soon as she became quieted she set her wits to work to discover who the secret enemy could be. At a conference she had with her husband in jail he told her that Cateret knew of the letter he had received from abroad. Louise, remembering that Cateret had once sought her hand in marriage, was seized with a suspicion which she finally confessed to her husband.

"Nonsense!" said Jean. "There can be nothing in that, since at my death Alphonse must pay you 50,000 francs." And he told her of their agreement. She was but half convinced.

Jean Desmoulins died on the scaffold beside which the agreement had been made. His wife shut herself up. After a few weeks she received one visitor, her husband's old friend, Alphonse Cateret. Him she saw constantly and but a few months after her husband's execution promised him that she would be his wife. Meanwhile she frequented the courts and places wherein she might learn the name of her husband's accuser. After awhile she became known as the widow who was hunting for one to send to the guillotine. One day she received a visit from one of the leaders of the revolution, who said to her:

"I know who informed on your husband. He is in my way, and I wish to get rid of him. I will tell you who he is on condition that you trump up an accusation against him, leaving me out of the matter. You will not believe me without proof. That proof I will furnish."

"It is proof alone that I wish. I know the man."

"How do you know him?"

"By the instinct of a woman."

"He is"—

"Alphonse Cateret."

"You are right."

The visitor the next day met the widow in a building where records were kept and, being in authority, took her to a room where no other man in France except the keeper could go. He took down a volume which contained a record of more villainy than any volume in the world and, consulting an index, turned to the name of Jean Desmoulins. There was the charge and the name of the accuser, Alphonse Cateret. Louise looked at it apparently without emotion; her guide closed the book, and they withdrew.

The friends of Louise Desmoulins were shocked a few months after her husband's death to learn that she was to marry Alphonse Cateret and the wedding day was set. Cateret, who did not know what moment the tide might turn against him, was secretly preparing to leave France with his bride. A week before the wedding was to come off the revolutionary committee got hold of his intended flight, he was arrested, and on the very day he was to have been married he died on the guillotine in the Place de la Revolution.

In the book in which his case was recorded appeared the name of Louise Desmoulins, informer.

A Judicious Inquiry.

A well known traveling man who visits the drug trade says he has often heard druggists inquire of customers who asked for a cough medicine, whether it was wanted for a child or for an adult, and if for a child they almost invariably recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The reason for this is that they know that there is no danger from it and that it always cures. There is not the least danger in giving it, and for coughs, colds and croup it is unsurpassed. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Some Seasonable Advice.

It may be a piece of superfluous advice to urge people at this season of the year to lay in a supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is almost sure to be needed before winter is over, and much more prompt and satisfactory results are obtained when taken as soon as a cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system, which can only be done by keeping the remedy at hand. This remedy is so widely known and so altogether good that no one should hesitate about buying it in preference to any other. For sale by Shoults & Co.

When Man Woees.

The average man wooes for choice a humming bird of the most gorgeous plumage. The man's taste is perfectly understandable. The mistake comes later. When he has secured his bird he carries it home and expects to find in the cage a demure little canary possessed of every staid, domestic and canarylike attribute.—London Queen.

How to Cure Corns and Bunions

First, soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it; then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily, rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn a few days to protect it from the shoe. As a general liniment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequaled. It is for sale by Shoults & Co.

Moses as a Sanitarian.

Moses himself was a sanitarian of no mean accomplishments, and many of the principles established by him in sanitary science might well be exploited in modern times. The type of camp which he established for the detention of unfortunate lepers, well modified to suit modern principles, would serve for the check and practical elimination of consumption.—Scientific American.

The Real Puzzle.

"I claim," remarked the man who comments on things, "that there is always room at the top for the man who works."

"Quite true," replied Senator Badger, "but one of the things that have always puzzled me is how so many get to the top without working."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Very Precise.

"Last Friday week was your birthday, wasn't it?" asked Miss Wabash.

"Nonsense!" retorted Miss Boston.

"Why, what's the matter?"

"It was the anniversary of my birth. I'm not an infant."—Philadelphia Press.

Saved His Life

J. W. Davenport, Wingo, Ky., writes June 14, 1902: "I want to tell you I believe Ballard's Snow Liniment saved my life. I was under the treatment of two doctors, and they told me one of my lungs was entirely gone, and the other badly affected. I also had a lump on my side. I don't think I could have lived over two months longer. I was induced by a friend to try Ballard's Snow Liniment. The first application gave me great relief; two fifty cent bottles cured me sound and well." It is a wonderful medicine and I recommend it to suffering humanity. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Cures Chills and Fever

G. W. Wirt, Nacogdoches, Texas, says: "His daughter has chills and fever for three years; he could not find anything that would help her till he used Heroine. His wife will not keep house without it, and cannot say too much for it." 50c. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Experimented With Poisons.

When Antony and Cleopatra were contemplating suicide they made a collection of a great variety of poisons and tried each of them on two or more slaves in order to ascertain whether death was accompanied with much apparent suffering. One historian declares that over 200 persons lost their lives in order that the information might be obtained. The result was that Antony killed himself with a dagger and Cleopatra either with one of her selected poisons or by a serpent's bite.

The Best Doctor

Rev. B. C. Horton, Sulphur Springs, Tex., writes July 19, 1902: "I have used in my family Ballard's Snow Liniment and Horehound Syrup, and they have proved certainly satisfactory. The liniment is the best we have ever used for headache and pains. The cough syrup has been our doctor for the last eight years." Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Cures Winter Cough

J. E. Gover, 101 N. Main St., Ottawa, Kans., writes: "Every fall it has been my wife's trouble to catch a severe cold, and therefore to cough all winter long. Last fall I got her a bottle of Horehound Syrup. She used it and has been able to sleep soundly all night long. Whenever the cough troubles her, two or three doses stop the cough, and she is able to be up and well." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Could Not Be Better.

The uniform success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has won for it a wide reputation and many people throughout the country will agree with Mr. Chas. W. Mattison, of Milford, Va., who says: "It works like magic, and is the best preparation I know of. It couldn't be any better." He had a serious attack of dysentery and was advised to try a bottle of this remedy, which he did, with the result that immediate relief was obtained. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Unusual Appreciation

ANOTHER jewel has been added to the crown of the metropolis of the Pacific Coast by one of her leading business men, Harper A. Smith. Mr. Smith is the head of the greatest enterprise of its kind in the West and recently came forward with the announcement that in appreciation of the patronage that had made his success possible he would hereafter share his profits with all who cared to become his partners.

Mr. Smith has in 25 years built up the largest mail order store this side of the Rockies. In addition to an enormous transient trade, the great six-story store at 25 Market Street, San Francisco, last year supplied on mail orders more than twelve thousand families as regular customers. Knowing that through co-operation greater things were possible, Mr. Smith formed a stock company known as "Smith's Cash Store Inc." and now offers all those who desire it a share in the business for $50.00. That amount buys five shares of stock of a par value of $10 each, guaranteed to bear interest at a minimum rate of six per cent per annum. The holder of stock may purchase all of his household supplies from the great cash store at a discount of five percent on the already remarkable Smith prices AS AN ADDED benefit.

It is not to be supposed that interested persons are limited to a $50.00 investment. Those who desire to do so may invest more and be assured that the income will be unusually large on the stock purchased. Mr. Smith as president and general manager of the great corporation has seen to it that the concern is purely mutual. Six per cent a year is simply the minimum interest rate which the stock will pay as has already been intimated. The articles of incorporation provide for an equable division of the net profits among the stockholders. To date the profits of the business and the trade discounts have made possible payments that at times were at the rate of thirty per cent a year on investment. Mr. Smith will see and talk with any who may be prepared to make a small investment from which quick returns are desired. The Cash Store is one of lower Market street's conspicuous buildings, and those visiting San Francisco will have no difficulty in locating it.
